Edited Book on “Languages, Cultures and Knowledge System of North-East India”

The diverse communities of North-East India have long used their own knowledge to harvesting and maintaining ecological sustainability, have traditional knowledge to medicinal plants or conservation and management of the biodiversity. It is important to note that languages and culture are methods of communication and systems of knowledge that have been passed from generation to generation over the millennia. Languages do form an essential part and tool to understand a new culture, where in many communities oral history is the primary way to pass their generational knowledge. Their rich tradition and knowledge is stored in their languages which is therefore more important than ever. Protecting languages and preserving their culture is therefore vital for transmission of their cultures, customs, knowledge system and belief system. With this concept note, Research and Development Cell (RDC) and Media and Publication Cell, LCB College proposes to come up with a peer reviewed research volume in English language on the theme - “Languages, Cultures and Knowledge System of North-East India” to be published by an international publisher with ISBN.

Editors- Dr. JubleeGoswami
Dr. AdritaGogoi

All academicians, research scholars and students are hereby requested to submit their papers to the following email address- rdclcbeditedbook1@gmail.com
